Easing Anxiety Around COVID-19

COVID-19 Supporting Anxious Parents/Caregivers

https://www.heretohelp.bc.ca/infosheet/covid-19-and-anxiety

Quick Facts

• Take Action: Look to trusted organizations and agencies like the BC Centre for Disease Control, Government of Canada, and World Health Organization for information about steps you can take to reduce your risk of getting sick or passing the illness on to others.

• Take Care of Yourself: Eat as well as possible, exercise regularly, get enough sleep, and make time for hobbies.

• Stay Connected with Family and Friends: Isolating yourself from others, such as staying home from school or working from home for longer periods of time, can affect your mood.

• Help others if you can: Helping others also includes being mindful of the supplies you keep at home. Excessive stockpiling means that your neighbours and other community members no longer have access to those supplies and it increases costs.

• Cutback on the amount of time you spend on social media and the news.

• Explore self-management strategies: https://www.anxietycanada.com/

• Seek help or support when you need it: Some signs may be, you can't think of anything else other than COVID-19, your anxiety is interfering with your daily life, you feel hopeless, etc.

How to Talk to Your Anxious Child About COVID-19

Quick Facts

• Begin with informing yourself. You can find up to date information about the symptoms, prevalence and current recommendations from your local public health unit or the Ontario Public Health (https://www.publichealthontario.ca/).

• Focus on the details that are most relevant and/or things that you and your child can control. Limit conversations with/around them about things they cannot control or help with (i.e.- lost wages for parents, a family friend who has travelled, a classmate that may have been exposed, etc.).

• Limit routine changes where possible Routine allows for predictability, which can be supportive of those with anxiety disorders.

• Share information in as concrete a way as possible: Speak to them about the ways you and the other adults around them are helping to keep them safe!

• Correct misinformation Help your child/teen to have the facts to work with.

• For those children/teens who do well with visuals, help them to create a reminder for themselves of what they can control - they can wash their hands regularly, practice social distancing and limit touching their faces.

• Strategic News Exposure Last, but in no way least, limit exposure to unnecessary anxiety-provoking information/activities.

Coronavirus Social Story (PowerPoint Presentation)

An infographic developed by an autism educator to help alleviate fears and anxiety children may be experiencing at this time.

At Home Learning for Kids
- How to follow a recipe
- How to write a resume
- How to read (ask them questions about what they’re reading, read together, make predictions, discuss why characters behave the way they do)
- How to write (keep a journal, keep a gratitude list, write instructions for something, write an alternate ending to favourite story or movie, write a story, keep a book of facts)
- Build physical literacy (do yoga, play catch, play frisbee, kick a soccer ball, shoot hoops)
- Build Fine motor skills (draw, colour, knit, crochet, cross-stitch, sew, weave)
- Spend time with your kids! Talk to them - ask them about their hopes & dreams & fears.
- Have them research things they’re interested in (a place they’d like to visit, a career they might like, a hobby they’d like to learn)
- Have them do a STEM challenge (build a tower, boat, bridge) out of random materials around the house
- In this trying time for families, to build some positivity. Begin a gratitude jar with your family. At the end of each day have each member of the family record their favourite memory of the day. Then when all this craziness is over, turn it into a scrapbook with the photos. Then when they get older you can look back on this piece of history through a happy lens, remembering all the wonderful moments rather than the way the history books will portray it.

Self-Care and Coping

How to help your family cope
● Modify your daily activities to meet the current reality of the situation and focus on what you can accomplish.
● Shift expectations and priorities to focus more on what gives you meaning, purpose, or fulfillment.
● Give yourself small breaks from the stress of the situation.
● Attempt to control self-defeating statements and replace them with more helpful thoughts. Here’s a helpful checklist for identifying unhealthy thoughts and coping with them https://arfamiliesfirst.com/wp-content/uploads/2013/05/Cognitive-Distortions.pdf.
● Remember, you are a role model for your children. How you handle this stressful situation can affect how your children manage their worries.
● If your family has experienced a serious illness or the death of a loved one, find ways to support each other, including:
  ● Reach out to your friends and family, talking to them about the death of your loved one. Use the telephone, email, or social media to communicate if necessary
  ● Find ways to honour the death of your loved one. Some activities may be done as a family, while additional activities may be done individually.
